

There's a feeling I've known, there's a moment I've chased
There's a woman I loved, in the sun and the rain
And she comes in the springtime, stays in the in the wind
At the first sign of snowfall, well she's gone again

We can walk in the garden, down by the lake
But there's a feeling unspoken, that her eyes won't say
And it comes in the morning, sleeps by the creek
Down where she loved another, in the evening's breeze

Even the oak trees above, leave a shadow below
So please just believe me, 'cause I don't want to go
But the leaves keep a'falling, until summer sweeps in She's a kindhearted woman, but the winter's a friend

You can take back your wishes, you can have all your things
I'll keep all the memories, and the songs that she won't sing
For our love is a story, she won't retell
'Til the clock stops a turning, and that curtain has fell

Leave your pride at the door, take a seat upon your thrown
For there's riches awaiting, in the pleasures we've known
The birds heard your crying, so they loaned me a tear
Now my shoulder will whisper all the words you won't hear
