

I want to see you like I've never seen you before
I want to hold you like I'll never touch you again
But your face has grown familiar and your hands are cold as ice
We don't know each other anymore I'm just passing through tonight

Then I spoke the words I'd heard before but never said
The same old line how it ain't you babe it's me
You're the sweetest tune but I'm the hardest rock
I just need some space and you need a better man

But if you ain't got troubles then you ain't been living
And there ain't no blame that ain't mine alone to bear
We've been treading on thin ice and summer is moving in
So just take my hand and hold me for one last night

I undressed you with my mind like I've done so many times
You said babe this is the last time you'll see me
I turn my head said babe, that may be
But when I close my eyes I can make up my own ending

I want those moments to last forever
I can't bring myself to get out of this bed
It really truly was the last time that I saw your pretty face
Don't take it so bad, son, you'll find a better girl

But if you ain't got troubles then you ain't been living
And there ain't no blame that ain't mine alone to bear
We've been treading on thin ice and summer is moving in
So just take my hand and hold me for one last night
